When we talk about public safety data and violence in Brazil, we’re usually met with alarming and growing numbers, eliciting our private war against ourselves. The country is being flooded with the blood of our youth as it is decimated by lethal violence.

The multiple projects and institutional products of the Brazilian Forum on Public Safety (BFPS) play a strategic role in clarifying this calamity. Such projects, products and interventions have been fundamental in highlighting the reality of the area and building an agenda proposing essential solutions to transform this perverse system, which in 2017, generated almost 64 thousand intentional violent deaths.

According to a survey made by Google Trends tool, all the searches made with the term “public safety” in the past 5 years are correlated with the searchers of the term “Brazilian Forum on Public Safety”. Meaning the public debate on public safety is influenced by data and projects of the BFPS unequivocally. This is a major legacy and represents a huge responsibility for the organization.

Based on the organization’s information, many analysts and/or professionals from the area alert us to the factual inefficiency of criminal and penitentiary policies in effect today. There is a lot of work being done; however, each institution, that’s part of what is called Criminal Justice and Public Safety System acts of its own volition, in accordance to its particular guidelines and priorities. There is almost no coordination or integration, therefore the directions of Public Safety are guided by daily emergencies and in flagrante delicto arrests, leading the country to live under fear and panic.

It’s never enough pointing out to the fact that Brazil has been presenting growing numbers of lethal violence for decades, which has been accentuated in the latest years with the rise of homicides in the Northeast region. In spite of this scenario, reducing lethality rates has been achieved in all states of the Northeast in 2018. Such a deed deserves to be praised, and its sustainability demands efforts from the authorities.

In order to do so, it is necessary to increase the Union’s participation in these efforts, both through the induction of policies in states and municipalities, both to ensure coordination and information.

It has been long since the BFPS has been emphasizing the fact that the lack of coordination between the federation and between State’s Powers and organs in preventing violence and fighting against organized crime is a major deficiency, hindering the improvement of public safety in Brazil. Moreover, in order to mitigate this lack of coordination, the organization has encouraged the creation of coordination spaces and efforts for integration.

The BFPS, in concert with the World Bank, anticipated trends and guided the debate on governance and integration in public safety. The organization was positively surprised when, in 2018, Brazil managed to overcome some of its historical difficulties in the field and advanced in the approval and regulation of the SUSP (Single Public Safety System).

The SUSP, which had been in progress for almost two decades, comes from the attempt to coordinate efforts and increase the capacity of the public authority to tackle crime, violence and the need to reduce fear and to guarantee rights. All of which is already being practiced in several other areas of public administration, such as health, education and social assistance, but faced strong resistance in the field of public safety.

The area remains lost in its corporate disputes, legal competencies and police mandates. The SUSP was formally born in the second semester of 2018. The data released by the Violence Monitor, a strategic partnership maintained by the BFPS with G1 News Portal and the Centre of Violence Studies of the University of São Paulo (NEV / USP), indicates a reduction of around 13% in homicides in comparison with 2017. This gives us some hope, though none of this is permanent and it all may collapse. Nonetheless, it’s an important step. The data produced by the Violence Monitor does not include deaths caused by the Police, which grew in Rio de Janeiro during the period of Federal Intervention in the states security system, as pointed out by data produced by the BFPS.

Even though SUSP has not yet yielded concrete results, its mere approval elicits a mood of cooperation in the organizations of the area. It may be the biggest evidence that the country realized the importance of federal and republican coordination in public security.

The Federal Government and the Judiciary have finally started talking about the integration and compatibility of their records and databases; several Federation Units have designed or remodelled special homicide reduction programs. In cases such as Alagoas, Rio Grande do Norte, Ceará and Acre, which were amidst an open dispute between criminal organizations initiated inside the prisons for new routes and points for international trafficking of drugs and weapons, created task forces dedicated to identifying and reducing attacks.

It is also important highlighting that the issue of violence against women was a priority, and several initiatives began being structured in order to address this issue. The BFPS once again, acted as a pioneer, establishing partnerships with various organizations. It created the BFPS Quality Stamp Awards to recognize successful practices for preventing and combating violence against women. Through it, several initiatives that were often diluted in the daily broadness of the Criminal Justice and Public Safety systems activities could be acknowledged and strengthened.

For all the aforementioned, BFPS, in its 12 years of existence, has reiterated its plural character (made up of different segments) and its commitment to this agenda as envisioned in the organization constitution. The BFPS is composed of men, women, police officers, judges, Public Ministry agents and Civil Society members, dedicated to envision and propose new pathways. In order to achieve this, the organization is radically committed to transparency and accountability, promoting them as tools for modernizing the Brazilian State and improving public policies.

In addition, for the coming 2019-2022 cycle, the BFPS has renewed its strategic planning, adding themes such as professional development, problem oriented policing, coordinated approach to combating organized crime, and monitoring of violence against fundamental rights in its agenda of information and evidence dissemination, as well as in its projects and institutional products.

For the organization, information has a strategic, transformative value, as it displays options and alternatives. From that point on, it is possible to address violence and suppress crime.

2018 was, without a doubt, one of the most difficult years for the BFPS in terms of sustainability and activity implementation. It was a year we had to rely on valuable support and aid from our partners. A year to renew our belief in networking and connecting with different actors in the field. It is not by accident that 2018 motivated and convinced us that coherence, political-electoral independence and the irreplaceable commitment to democratic and civic values of our Constitution are and will remain our main strengths.

Certainly, there will be many challenges in 2019, but we will not lack the strength to defend citizenship as the most powerful instrument for the lasting reduction of violence and fear, advocating for the modernization of public security.
Since its creation, the Brazilian Forum on Public Safety acts based on guidelines and defined values of its Social Charter. Every three years, it defines its work plan in its strategic planning meetings, led by the Fiscal and Administrative councils and some external guests, contributing to the equation of expectations and challenges.

In 2018 the organization achieved its planning for the triennium 2019-2021. The work plan recommends that the project cycle be built with a view to achieving the objectives outlined, making the best of opportunities for innovation and financial sustainability of the BFPS, comprising five main thematic axes.

The BFPS conceives four ways of acting when it comes to its main themes. They are mostly defined by the profile of the technical team, funding opportunities available and opportunities offered by the public authorities. Themes may be worked upon through one or more of the following dimensions, according to their nature:

I) Advocacy;
II) Dialogue and public debate production;
III) Public polices proposal and formulation;
IV) Information production, monitoring and evaluation.

Propostas dos candidatos ao Governo de SP são detalhadas num artigo publicado na Folha de S.Paulo.

O programa de governo de João Doria (PSDB) se acentua na redução de mortes violentas, grande vitrine da gestão tucana no estado. A taxa chegou a 10,7% em 2001, semelhante ao ano passado, quase três vezes menor que a média brasileira e a menor entre os estados, segundo balanço do Fórum Brasileiro de Segurança Pública.

"A devastating scenario": Brazil sets new record for homicides at 63,880 deaths

Data from the Independent Brazilian Public Security Forum said that an average of 14 people died at the hands of police officers every day – an increase of 20% from the previous year.

Rapes also rose 8% to 60,078, while murders of women increased 6.7% to 4,399.

"It is a devastating scenario," said Renato Sérgio de Lima, director of the forum, who said the homicide figures had been exacerbated by antiquated laws and police procedures and the growth in organised crime. Most victims were young, black men from poor urban areas, he said.

"The numbers show we have a serious problem with lethal violence," he said.

Propostas de Bolsonaro para segurança não dependem só dele; veja análise

As propostas apresentadas, porém, são vistas com reservas por especialistas e pesquisadores em segurança pública. O pesquisador do (ipea) no (Instituto de Pesquisa Econômica Aplicada) e conselheiro do Fórum Brasileiro de Segurança Pública, Daniel Cunha, afirma que as propostas do Boissonaro vão na “contramão do que se espera de políticas efetivas e racional.”

"A política dele está baseada no tríplice endurecimento penal, licença indiscutida para o policial militar e a possibilidade de todos terem arma do fogo. Cada um desses elementos é um suicídio terrível, e conjuntamente vão significar uma inquietação social,” afirma.

The Violence Driving Migration Isn’t Just Gangs

Brutal criminals are part of the problem, but too many governments are complicit in the carnage

By Rachel Aitkenhead

Why are thousands of Central Americans marching toward our southern border, despite the presidential races and new U.S. troops arrayed against them? Like previous generations of migrants, some are seeking economic opportunity. But many are trying to cross because they are fleeing violence so severe that they feel they have no choice. Their very public group effort is an attempt to evade the rape, kidnapping and extortion by smugglers that commonly beset undocumented migrants who cross Mexico on solitary Journeys.

Como a crise nas Forças Armadas afeta soldados, fronteiras e carros blindados

Segundo Arthur Trindade, conselheiro do Forum Brasileiro de Segurança Pública e professor da Universidade de Brasília, em teoria o governo federal deveria repassar verbas para as Forças Armadas para custear tais operações. Mas não é o que tem acontecido na prática.

"O que vemos é que muitas vezes as Forças Armadas são empregadas e não recebem o repasse, ou recebem parcialmente o valor", aponta Trindade. "Com isso, recursos anteriormente alocados para outras áreas precisam ser remanejados."

O que Bolsonaro e Haddad propõem para a segurança pública

ISABEL FOGAREDO As propostas mais concretas de Bolsonaro são três: o endurecimento das penas, a liberação do posse de armas e a licença para matar (o esquema de licitâncias automática). A primeira proposta é ineficaz, tem já foi previa. Quanto às outras duas, considero perigosas. No Brasil, se aprovadas, elas terão uma consequência muito clara, que é o banho de sangue nas periferias. E isso que se trata concretamente.
